OUR HISTORY

“Oh, you want more sinks? Sure, we’ll give you more sinks.” The story goes that in 2006, when a building inspector declared that our brand-new pub needed additional handsinks before it could be opened, we, uh, went a little overboard. And thus, behold the Wall of Sinks! Collected from friends, other McMenamins properties and Portland’s Rebuilding Center, the sinks now anchored on the wall range in date from 1912 to a 1960s model, with no two alike. Several feature portraits of OSU alumni, such as Nobel Prize-winner Linus Pauling, Capitol Records’ Bozo the Clown and Stacy Allison, the first American woman to summit Mount Everest. The copper pipes that connect the sinks were made from recycled ice- and coffee-maker lines, while the faucets were reused from various McMenamins locations. Cheers to McMenamins plumber/sculptor Jeff Allen for both meeting the inspector’s needs and crafting something completely original.
