OUR HISTORY As a woman in the early 1900s, Jean Campbell was a trail blazer in Portland's male-dominated business world. She established this very building as the renowned Campbell Hotel in 1912. A vital part of the business was its restaurant, for which her mother was the cook. A stylish mansion – the grand home of Robert Livingstone, the Scotsman who introduced the game of golf to the Northwest – had stood on this corner lot since 1891. During Prohibition, the Campbell Hotel restaurant was managed by Sydney McDougal, who kept a keen eye out for “coppers,” since one of her most popular offerings was a coffee cup full of illegal hooch. McMenamins acquired this storied spot in 1990, rechristening it the Rams Head Pub.
