PUB HISTORY

In 1905, when Oregon's South Salem Hills were covered in orchards, a splendid house was built along the market road to Eugene as a dwelling for Civil War vet Franklin Thompson and his family. More recently, the Thompson residence became a succession of wildly different commercial ventures, ranging from a German restaurant to a children's daycare, hair dresser to a used clothing shop. Then, early in 1990, McMenamins jumped at the opportunity to breathe new life into the storied place once again, as Salem's first brewpub since Prohibition. It was named Thompson Brewery & Public House, in honor of its original occupants.
