PUB HISTORY

American explorer Daniel Boone's grandson settled here in 1846, establishing a ferry service across the Willamette River and improving an ancient Native American trail into a "modern" wagon road (today's Boones Ferry Road). In 1911, the local Methodist society built the lovely little church that still stands today. Although its first minister, Rev. John Exon, was better known as a river boat pilot, he did get things rolling; the spirit of the local Methodists continued to run high for decades to come. Years later, McMenamins took stewardship of the old church and in 2011 gave it a creative restoration that added a brewery and bar to the basement, as well as this sizable pub alongside.
