Take a step back in time at the Olympic Club Hotel, a landmark of Centralia's historic downtown. Built in 1913, this storied spot is replete with fantastic tales of gamblers' jackpots, revenuer raids, dark secrets deeply buried and a famous bandit's bravado. It's like being in an Old West museum—the décor is virtually unchanged since the property's 1913 inception! The building's blend of sophisticated finery and turn-of-the-century extravagance is still in evidence, such as in the magnificent mahogany back bar and leaded-glass canopies.

Our staff can give you a history tour of the property—they may show you the secret button in one of the booths (to alert staff when the Feds were around? to call for female entertainment?) and the various means and methods that were used to conceal alcohol during Prohibition. They can also tell you the fascinating story of Roy Gardner, the dashing "King of the Escape Artists" who was once captured here at the hotel (and then escaped again!).

The Olympic Club is located halfway between Portland and Seattle and just 39 miles from the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument. Centralia also boasts more than 350 antique dealers, many of which are within blocks of the hotel.

Along with our own lovely hotel and theater, we are booking special events at the historic Centralia train depot across the street, which can accommodate up to 80 guests. Events held at this working station also include our McMenamins catering, ales, wines and spirits. With the Oly Club's pub and on-site brewery, 27 intimate guest rooms, billiard hall, and movie theater, the Olympic Club is a unique setting for meetings and private events alike.
