Tippy South Cloud Black Tea Steep 3-4 min

BAGDAD

Theater & Pub

HISTORY

The Bagdad Theater has been a Southeast Portland landmark, anchoring the Hawthorne district on this visible corner for the better part of a century. At the time of its opening in 1927, the Bagdad was the city's largest movie palace outside the downtown area. Capitalized in part by the deep pockets of its parent company, today's Universal Studios, the Bagdad was toasted as "a triumph of artistry and craftsmanship."

Among the marvels of the new theater were a gurgling fountain, the grand colonnade in its foyer, and a Middle-Eastern décor throughout, even to the Arabian-styled uniforms worn by the usherettes. Even the conductor selected to lead the Bagdad's orchestra was a musician of great prominence, having studied under Tchaikovsky.

During its early years, silent movies and vaudeville reigned supreme. In fact, vaudeville remained a key part of the Bagdad's programs through the 1940s. Sammy Davis, Jr. danced on this stage; Mercedes unfurled her exotic fluorescent dance magic here; Tippy the Wonder Dog wowed audiences with his tricks; and untold numbers of jugglers, xylophonists, and impersonators rounded out the Bagdad's quarter-century of live vaudeville performances. Every bill was an amalgam of enormous talent, the bizarre, and the mundane, all packaged together into productions that traveled the nation, from one town to the next.

The Bagdad, of course, has also screened thousands of movies over the decades, from Hollywood blockbusters to local indie films. It has also been host to numerous notable movie premiere galas, including the Oregon premiere of One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest in 1975, with actors Jack Nicholson and Louise Fletcher on hand. A few years later, Kitten Natividad, star attraction of Russ Meyer's Beyond the Valley of the Ultra-vixens, made a revealing appearance for the Bagdad's premiere of that film.

More recently, director Gus Vas Sant hosted the premiere of his movie, My Own Private Idaho; James "Scotty" Doohan and Nichelle "Uhura" Nichols made personal appearances to promote Star Trek IV; and Marlee Matlin charmed the large crowds that turned out for What the Bleep Do We Know!? (a film in which the Bagdad itself had a featured role!). McMenamins has been steward of the theater since 1991, restoring the building to its historic grandeur and infusing its remarkable spaces with a renewed sense of fun and wonder, from the majestic auditorium to the cavernous Back Stage Bar, welcoming restaurant and the atmospheric Greater Trumps cigar bar. Along the way, we've also made some notable upgrades, including the recent transition to first-run films presented with digital projection and Surround Sound. Enjoy!
