OUR HISTORY

The cold wind was too much for one farmer, but in 1911 county officials thought it a good location for a poor farm. Seventy-five years later, McMenamins saw the county institution-turned-indoor-bird-sanctuary as a magical spot for new adventures. Initially, the Mad Crapper, pentagrams, and Racer X reigned over the manor. Then, in Hollywood's eyes, the old women of the retirement home turn into beautiful assassins. The Beast was transformed to a Beauty, soothed by the heavenly strains of bagpipes, artistic renderings, and garden plantings. Still, Edgefield persists as a phantom's frolic, a musician's enclave, and a never-ending work-in-progress (the motto being, "in every building there lies the potential for a bar").
